

Albert Lacombe Board Report – October 2018

Joan Crockett/Trustee/St. Albert Ward

“We must enforce in students the need to become lifelong learners and to be prepared to ‘return to learn’.”

Dr. Fassina, President of Athabasca University

I heard Dr Fassina speak at a Chamber luncheon in October and have a brief summary of his talk and the importance of lifelong learning. In the past, he says credentials at some post-secondary institutions was important for a good start to a successful career but lifelong learning that is fluid and contextual will be important in the future.

- Dr Fassina who says he himself has 10 years of formal education but notes that this type of episodic learning of the past is not functional in the digital age when the pace of change is changing faster than we can adapt to it. Our ability to be productive has not changed. Therefore, the gap between productivity and change is growing exponentially with a huge need for learners to relearn.
- Consequence – “If 65% of jobs will need credentials by 2020”, as Dr Fassina suggested, Universities and Colleges will need to adapt and adapt quickly. It is also believed that 25% of the people will need to be retrained by 2030. Therefore, we need an Amazon type of vision to teach soft skills and technical skills in a shorter time frame to produce Dr Fassina’s “Renaissance Grad”.

Highlights Relevant to GSACRD:

In this 21st Century climate, 4 – 5 years of formal education is not enough for a 35-year career. We must enforce in students the need to become lifelong learners and to be prepared to ‘return to learn’.

Good News
